

Recommendation Letter

To whom it may concern,

Zhuge Chen was my student in Malware courses. He was good and analytical, and performed well in my courses.

Chen has a strong ambition in malicious software research. After he passed my malicious software related courses, he took further dedicated study in software security.

He is now with knowledge of how to develop software debugging platform, aiming to do some contribution in malicious software anti-debugging field.

From the things that he showed me I would say that he is on track to graduate Master's courses in allowed time, and possibly with honors.

Anti-debugging technique is always an important topic in malicious software research. A valuable research of anti-debugging techniques can enhance computer virus analysts' effectiveness in their daily work.

I recommend Zhuge Chen for Skype and Study IT in Estonia Master's Scholarship 2015.

Toomas Lepik
Information Security Expert
Tallinn University of Technology